

VFL MATCH PROGRAMME AND RESULTS 1900

The short-lived system introduced in 1898, and utilised for the last time this year, involved the eight clubs playing each other home and away, with the team finishing at the head of the ladder - the 'minor premier' - earning the right to contest the premiership deciding match at the end of the season. Once the home and away rounds were completed, the teams were split into two sections, each containing four team. This 'sectional round' involved every club playing another three matches, with the two section winners then engaging in a knock-out match for the right to confront the minor premier for the premiership.
